Contenu du cours

This is an English for Specific Academic Purposes course designed for social scientists.

The syllabus is divided into different units focusing on a range of topics to give student the skills they need to write academic English and carry out a research project.

These topics will be explored by means of discussions, presentations, written assignments, and reading and listening activities.

Vocabulary input is linked to the topics studied, and includes academic vocabulary aimed at improving expression in an academic context.

Objectifs (et/ou acquis d'apprentissages spécifiques)

To enable students to answer a research question that they, themselves, have formulated.

To enable students to summarize and integrate information from articles, both journalistic and academic, and from spoken discourse.

To enable students to understand extended spoken discourse of both academic and semi-academic nature, and to take notes on content.

To enable students to give presentations on a topic related to their studies.

To enable students to discuss certain issues related to human sciences.
