Course content

Exposure to over 800 slides of film stills allows students to visualize the historical panorama. Each class is followed by the screening of a feature film (or a documentary) regarding the country, the genre, and the period discussed on the same day. A course book filled with key images to be memorized for the exam is published by the University Press.

Objectives (and/or specific learning outcomes)

To introduce the students to the global evolution of the so-called 7th Art by considering some of the major titles, personalities and movements that made film history. (Even years: "From its Origins to WWII" — Odd years: "From WWII to the New Waves.")

Teaching method and learning activities

The slide-show which the course relies on for illustration is designed to spark and stimulate the visual memory of the students, and to give them as wide a variety of landmarks as is possible in the course of a quarter. The aim is to develop critical and aesthetic skills that can guide the students as they negotiate their way in a world overwhelmed by cultural consumerism, and to inspire the curiosity in a varied student body (film scholars, journalists, art historians, architects, etc.) in the films of the past.
