Course content

Case studies and case law and discussion of them, comparing approaches to the subject, learning to apply the law and especially to reflect on problems. Students are expected to carefully prepare each course, read the case to be discussed, and think ahead to the questions mentioned in the syllabus.

Objectives (and/or specific learning outcomes)

Putting the subject into perspective in order to develop coherence in a complex subject, understanding to this end the mechanisms of the market and how to ensure optimal interaction between law and economics.

Teaching method and learning activities

As much as possible, the floor is given to students whose active participation is expected. Mandatory seminars (30% in the grade).

Contribution to the teaching profile

Explore further with examples and discussions that focus as much as possible on current events.

References, bibliography and recommended reading

A selective bibliography for each case that is discussed is distributed at the beginning of the year.
