Programme objectives

The various courses in the curriculum help students get familiar with scientific research, while also preparing them to professions related to social work, especially in a context of cultural diversity.

Programme's added value

The Master in Sociology is designed to let students orient their education depending on their professional aspirations: either a career in research or academic teaching, or a non-academic career in a public or private organisation in which they can make the most of their specific training. Whatever path they choose, the range of courses offered is designed to avoid premature specialisation in one of the various branches of sociology. Dependent on what they choose, students can familiarise themselves with multiple aspects of sociology, or opt to specialise in just one or two

International/Openness

Students can spend a term or a whole year abroad. The department has exchange agreements with more than a hundred partner universities in Europe and throughout the world.

Job opportunities

By giving students specific tools and skills, the Master in Sociology enables them to work in public and private organisations in a variety of professional sectors. This Master can also lead to more traditional activities for graduates in sociology, namely research and teaching. Working as a sociologist does not imply being an out-of-touch theoretician, quite the contrary: sociologists engage with society, and have the tools required to act upon the world around them. Sociologists are practitioners, for instance when they conduct studies or provide advice, or when they integrate into a professional environment in which they enable the cohabitation of different groups, solve conflicts, or improve mutual understanding.

Master in Sociology

Focus Professional

The Master in Sociology provides students with the critical analysis skills necessary to analyse life within society and the challenges involved, with a view to contributing—beyond ready-made explanations—to explain how it is organised and how it functions, to inform citizens about the basics of the society in which they live, and to come up with answers to the questions that preoccupy public authorities, politicians, and decision-makers with regard to current social issues.

The Master in Sociology allows students to acquire both theoretical knowledge and the methodological tools used to gather data, which is an essential aspect of this discipline.

At the end of the programme, graduates will have acquired both general knowledge and more specialised knowledge in concrete fields (culture, work, social policy, urban policy, migration issues, education) and investigatory methods.

Master in Sociology

Focus Migration and Cultural Diversity

The Master in Sociology provides students with the critical analysis skills necessary to analyse life within society and the challenges involved, with a view to contributing—beyond ready-made explanations—to explain how it is organised and how it functions, to inform citizens about the basics of the society in which they live, and to come up with answers to the questions that preoccupy public authorities, politicians, and decision-makers with regard to current social issues.

The Master in Sociology allows students to acquire both theoretical knowledge and the methodological tools used to gather data, which is an essential aspect of this discipline.

At the end of the programme, graduates will have acquired both general knowledge and more specialised knowledge in concrete fields (culture, work, social policy, urban policy, migration issues, education) and investigatory methods.
