Programme’s added value
The program is one of the most renowned in EU legal education, counting amongst its alumni Judges of the CJEU and of the Tribunal as well as EU Commissioners.

Teaching methods
In order to train fully fledged legal professionals in EU law, the Advanced Master in European law draws on its privileged location to bring together high profile practitioners and teachers into its teaching staff. Through an international group, the students will therefore be able to analyse the most recent developments in EU law whilst appreciating the evolution of the latter in relation to their national systems.

To do so, the Master is based on an interactive approach to teaching, such as simulated plea bargaining or simulated trials to allow students to put the knowledge that they have acquired directly into practice.

International/Openness
Every year, the promotion is fully representative of the Union’s rich legal tradition.

With more than 20 nationalities, all legal systems of the EU are represented.

Job opportunities
Once they finish their Advanced Master in European law, students are ready to access a wide range of jobs related to law and to European integration.

Thus, among its graduates, the Master has led to people taking on roles as diverse as: judge in the Court of the European Union, adviser to the Court of Justice, civil servants in European, international or national institutions, lawyers acting in different branches of EU law, managers in NGOs or interest groups, and teachers/researchers in European law.

Specialized Master in European Law

The Master's course includes a core part (European constitutional law, judicial protection in the EU, the law of external relations of the EU as well as two courses on the basics of European competition law and internal market).

In addition, students have the option to orient their course to a particular area of European law, be that ‘European economic law’ or the ‘Area of Freedom, Security and Justice’.

Finally, students have to produce a master thesis (TFE) at the end of their studies in one of the three following forms:

- TFE ‘research’ on an issue relating to European law;
- Career-oriented TFE combined with an internship;
- TFE in the form of participation in a moot court competition (European Law Moot Court Competition or another).
